

Mari Khardziani

Mari Khardziani is Head of International Relations Unit at National Agency of Public Registry (NAPR) under Ministry of Justice of Georgia, in charge of international relations and coordination/management of international projects. Since January, 2016, she is also a member of UNECE WPLA Bureau and permanent correspondent of EuroGeographics.

After working in private sector for 5 years, in 2004 she moved to NAPR - a government authority responsible for land administration, business registry, geodesy, mapping and addressing in Georgia, where she worked at different positions, including over 12 years at managerial position. Being at NAPR since its foundation, she was involved in implementation of the reforms and made a valuable contribution to creation of a well-functioning and sustainable land registration system in Georgia. Her top skills and competences cover international relations, organizational leadership and management, strategic planning, project management and land administration.

Ms. Khardziani holds Master's degree in Public Administration (MPA) from Georgia Institute of Public Affairs (GIPA).
